Barbara Kruger is best known for her silkscreen prints where she placed a direct and concise caption across the surface of a found photograph. Her prints from the 1980s cleverly encapsulated the era of "Reaganomics" with tongue-in-cheek satire; especially in a work like (Untitled) I shop therefore I am (1987), ironically adopted by the mall generation as their mantra.

Female Iconoclasts: Barbara Kruger | Artland Magazine

Barbara Kruger (*1945) is a key artist of the Pictures Generation and in the development of appropriation art, post-conceptualism and feminist art. Since the mid-1970s, she has juxtaposed her own texts with found images in order to reveal and undermine socially-ingrained assumptions about power, capitalism, politics, and gender that often go unquestioned, driving socio-political debates.
