Crabwalk
Crabwalk is not as good, but is much shorter and plays on familiar Grass themes, namely post war German society and its attitudes. Grass uses the little-know worst maritime disaster in history, the sinking of the Wilhelm Gustloff by a Russian submarine in January 1945, with the loss of over 9,000 lives, as the fulcrum for his story.

Günter Grass has been wrestling with Germany's past for decades now, but no book since The Tin Drum has generated as much excitement as this engrossing account of the sinking of the Wilhelm Gustloff. A German cruise ship turned refugee carrier, it was attacked by a Soviet submarine in January 1945. Some 9,000 people went down in the Baltic Sea, making it the deadliest maritime disaster of all time.

Crabwalk - Günter Grass - Google Books
"Crabwalk" is a very interesting analysis of Germany and its' perspective on its' sins in WWII. It is told through the perspective of what was probably the most greivous act by the Allies against Nazi Germany; the sinking of the ship Wilhelm Gustloff. The estimated loss of life on this ship (essentially carrying civilians) approaches 10000.

Amazon.com: Customer reviews: Crabwalk
Mitigating humor comes from Paul's decision to "sneak up on time in a crabwalk, seeming to go backward but actually scuttling sideways," often teasing the reader by veering off at climactic moments to ratchet up the tension before coming to his bleak conclusion: "Never will it end." Grass as lucid, sardonic, and unsparing as always.
